

SAVVY

MARCH 2004 ISSUE 20

Hitting the home truths with friends

Less bull than Balderdash, more stimulating than Scrabble and hugely more insightful than Pictionary, Nitty Gritty is a game taking the dinner party crowd by surprise.

A great way to get to know your friends even better, a boost to table talk and lots of hilarious fun, this is one witty game.

With some 1000 questions in the deck, you and your friends get to reveal another side of yourself in the safety of a game-zone or, if the answer is too revealing, practise your lying.

What is the worst experience you've had involving alcohol?

Do you believe aliens exist?

Have you ever fantasised about a workmate?

If you had to take three people with you to a bomb shelter, who would they be?

The questions are sometimes simple, sometimes complex. What's easy for one to answer will present a great challenge to others.

Team up with someone you think you know well, read the question, let your team-mate write down an answer, then you take a wild guess at what that answer is.

If you know your friends really well you could get it right and get to throw the dice again. If not, it's the next team's go. Socially savvy, Nitty Gritty is bound to raise an uproar — even an argument or two — but at the end of the game you will know who your friends are.

We have three games of Nitty Gritty to give away.

For those spirited individuals who think they can handle the nitty gritty pace, answer the above questions and send your entry to Savvy Nitty Gritty Competition, Townsville Bulletin, PO Box 230, Townsville, 4810.

Don't forget to include your contact details. All winners will be notified and results published in the next edition of Savvy.